“Seven Spanish Angels” was written by Troy Seals & Eddie Setser in 1984, about a Mexican outlaw and his beautiful girlfriend who are trying to outrun a posse. They decide to fight. Before the final gunfight, they embrace, promising each that God will spare them and they will be in a better place. He is immediately killed, and she knowing the gun is empty, points the gun and she is then shot dead. She had prayed, “Father, please forgive me, I can’t make it without my man.” After the final shooting, seven Spanish angels gather “to pray for the lovers in the valley of the gun. After the smoke clears, there was thunder from the throne” and the angels proceed to take “another angel home.”
